Figure 1. The effect of the number of trials on the number of correct responses. The number of correct responses was significantly higher for the 10 trials condition than for the 5 trials condition. Error bars represent the standard error of the mean.

Figure 1. The effect of the number of trials on the number of correct responses. The number of correct responses was significantly higher than the number of incorrect responses for all groups. The number of correct responses was significantly higher than the number of incorrect responses for all groups. The number of correct responses was significantly higher than the number of incorrect responses for all groups.

Figure 1 illustrates the experimental setup. A participant is seated at a table, observing a screen. The screen displays a 3D model of a hand holding a tool, with a coordinate system (x, y, z) and a scale bar. The participant is instructed to observe the hand and tool, and to adjust the tool's position to match the target position.
